The Camden County Addiction Awareness Taskforce was created in 2014 to address the devastating impact of substance use disorder on families throughout Camden County. Working closely with municipalities, health care institutions, social service organizations and other community stakeholders, the taskforce provides programs to prevent and treat addiction aimed at creating sustained recovery. Through the passionate work of dozens of committed individuals, the many programs created have helped countless individuals and families.

The AATF has distributed over 40,000 pieces of educational literature throughout the county, held community awareness and educational events with over 11,000 attendees, and worked with local municipalities and law enforcement to expand access to medication drop boxes and implemented Project S.A.V.E. (Substance Abuse Visionary Effort) - bridging the gap between those arrested for substance abuse related charges. So far, 3,484 referrals were made into the program with almost 700 assessed and agreed to enter treatment.

In June 2020, AATF began distributing fentanyl test strips at shelters and regional clinics. The successful HALO program that provides emotional support to young loved ones of overdose victims was also expanded this summer.

The task force's naloxone collaboration training program has equipped residents with overdose prevention kits. Our local health systems are key partners ensuring law enforcement agencies in Camden County are supplied with this life saving treatment. Since 2015, 12,345 saves were made by Emergency Medical Services and Law Enforcement.

If you or a loved one needs help, please call our 24/7 toll-free confidential hotline at (877) 266-8222. For additional information and services, contact the Camden County Office of Mental Health and Addiction at (856) 374-6361 or visit CamdenCounty.com

Together, let's erase stigma and advocate for change.
