Marijuana is the illicit drug of initiation for youth and young adults, and it's no longer anything close to the drug it once was. Parents need to be educated about what the industry is doing to change the product. It's not the Woodstock weed most American adults think it is.

Marijuana's perception of harm by youth has never been lower, and usage has never been higher. Potency is at an all-time high and the genetically-modified product that is being industrialized and commercialized is not being tested. This should be concerning to parents, to educators, to everyone. But we're not even talking about marijuana. We need to talk about what marijuana has become.
