At Camden County Technical Schools (CCTS), in addition to their rigorous academic coursework including college classes, high school students are offered a choice of 26 career programs and six Academies: Information Technology, Law & Public Safety, Medical Arts, Music, Pre-Engineering, and Performing Arts.

Students can earn certifications and state licenses as part of their high school curriculum. These provide a significant edge in the job market, when pursuing a college degree and/or further training. In the most recent follow-up study of our district's graduates, ninety-eight percent were placed in employment and/or continued their education at the postsecondary level, often at top-level colleges and universities.
